WHILE COMBATING THE FORCES OF THE MYTHOS, INVESTIGATORS ARE OFTEN EXPOSED to hideous horror and blasphemous secrets that drive them into the embrace of insanity. If they continue on their perilous path, they may eventually be defeated either through total insanity or death. In either case, they generate a large paper trail which others can follow. An admission form to a local sanitarium can spark an investigation into the life of a deceased inmate, and lead the seeker into realms of unearthly evil. This supplement is meant to aid the keeper in the creation of such clues for the investigator. Forms include a death certificate (good for any death that occurs in Massachusetts), a psychological profile, a police fingerprint form (for when the investigators run afoul of the law), and even a few singularly suggestive ink blots. These documents are all centered around Arkham Sanitarium and the related businesses and institutions in the small town of Arkham, Massachusetts.

Most forms that deal with Arkham Sanitarium are self-explanatory in their function, but are described in brief below.

The Inpatient Admission form is used for those who walk in from the street as well as those committed to the sanitarium by the court (check the appropriate box). The difference is that voluntary patients may leave whenever they want, and those who were committed are released on the doctors' orders only.

The Psychological Profile is the doctor's opinions of the investigators' ravings of otherworldly horrors. The Ink Blots may be attached to the form, and may have additional comments written on the reverse side. Additional sheets of regular notebook paper may be used for lengthy explanations and case histories.

The Patient Record is recorded by nurses. Depending on the severity of the condition, a new entry may be made as often as every quarter hour. These forms would normally be clipped to a board and attached to the bed, but they are now kept at the nurse's station since many patients became distressed after reading the form.

A Patient Transfer form is kept on file when someone is transferred to or from the sanitarium. In the case of people being transferred to the sanitarium, Arkham Sanitarium is listed as the receiving facility. Patients may be transferred from the Larkin Institute or even St. Mary's Teaching Hospital.

Visitor Registration forms are kept at the receptionist's desk and everyone who walks in must sign the document. They should also surrender any weapons, but the sanitarium staff assume that most visitors are polite enough not to carry guns around. Anybody who uses a gun will be pursued by the police.

The Invoice is the bill the players get after being "cured." This kind of attention isn't free, you know, and they did use money back then. The sanitarium charges $110 per month normally, but additional charges may accrue if special treatments are required.

The Sanitarium Letterheads are used for all official correspondence. The regular letterhead is used for official sanitarium business, while the "angel letterhead" is given only to the patients. The happy pictures keep them from getting too excited, although some see disturbing imagery in the sun graphic (say, like Azathoth). Dr. Dunbar and Dr. Harcourt do not have their own stationery, and will attach their cards if needed.

Other documents are more peripheral to the operation of the sanitarium, but could pose some relevance: court reports may be included in a patient file; the police record fingerprints if the person committed a crime while insane; the lawyers of Arkham may write letters demanding the release (or incarceration) of their clients; and dental records would also be kept on file.

Arkham is described in great detail in The Compact Arkham Unveiled, but some explanation of the more prominent businesses and individuals is included here.

The Larkin Institute is a small private sanitarium that takes its clients from the wealthy populace of Arkham, charging $220.00 a month. Their facilities are very comfortable, but they often give patients with real problems to Arkham Sanitarium. The Larkin Institute would use the patient transfer form as well as the Institute letterhead.

G. R. Feldman is the town dentist and keeps the records of citizens on hand. Even in the 1920s, dental records were used to identify corpses, and Arkham has had its share of unknown bodies found floating down the Miskatonic River. Feldman uses the dental chart and has a card.

Dr. Ephraim Sprague is the local town physician and also acts as the Essex County medical examiner when the real county coroner is too busy or otherwise unavailable. Sprague has his own card, and would be the one to fill out the death certificate.

Lt. Ray Stuckey is the local cop-on-the-take, and may antagonize the investigators in many confrontations. He has a card of his own but won't necessarily fill out the fingerprint form; there are other cops for that. All police records will also have a copy at the city courthouse, usually within a day or two of the arrest.

Saltonstall, Chambers and Cassidy are the core of Arkham's meager legal community. Saltonstall is an old gentleman snob who is close with the local municipal judge. Chambers would be called an "ambulance chaser" if he were alive today, defending the bootleggers with unusual fervor. Cassidy is the promising young attorney from New York, here to make a name for himself. Cassidy has made enemies of both Saltonstall and the municipal judge Keezar Randall. All three of them have their own letterheads and business cards.

Other Chaosium publications that may prove helpful are Taint of Madness and The Compact Arkham Unveiled. Taint of Madness expands the insanities and treatments available to investigators as well as legal recourse, and The Compact Arkham Unveiled details the town of Arkham, describing the movers and shakers of the quaint New England town.
